

Health Data Privacy Policy

Effective Date: September 29, 2025

Applicability and Scope

Washington and Nevada require that we have a Consumer Health Data Privacy Policy under certain health privacy laws. This is that policy, and describes Radius Health, Inc.'s collection and use practices for "consumer health data" collected from Washington and Nevada residents. This policy applies only in the narrow circumstances where we are collecting and processing consumer health data as that term is defined under Washington and Nevada law. For example, this includes personal information linked to you that identifies your physical or mental health status. In this policy we refer to this information as "CHD."

This policy does not apply to our general privacy practices. To learn about how we treat personally identifiable information we collect that is not governed by the Washington and Nevada health privacy laws, please visit our general Privacy Policy available on our website. This policy does not apply to any "protected health information" or information that has been de-identified. Our collection and use of information in connection with clinical trials or other health-related research is also not covered by this Policy. It is described in the consent forms and/or other notices provided for those purposes. This policy also does not apply to information we collect from employees or contractors. This policy is incorporated into our Terms of Use.

Categories of Consumer Health Data We Collect

The type of CHD we collect depends on your relationship with us. It also depends on how you interact with us. For example, CHD we might collect includes:

- Information about your health conditions or status, treatments, diseases or diagnosis. This could also include your health-related surgeries or procedures;
- Use or purchase of prescribed medications;
- Bodily functions and vital signs or symptoms;
- Diagnoses or diagnostic testing, treatment, or medication; and
- Data that could identify you as an individual seeking health care services.

Purpose of Collection and Use of Consumer Health Data

We use CHD to provide support and services reasonably expected and requested by you. This may include reviewing your ability to access or use certain products and services. It also is used to investigate reports submitted about our products. We also use CHD as permitted by your consent. We use CHD to fulfill our legal obligations and as otherwise permitted by law.

Additionally, we may deidentify CHD so that it cannot reasonably be reidentified by us or by another person. We may use this deidentified data for any reason permitted by applicable law. If we deidentify information that was originally based on CHD we maintain and use that information in deidentified form and will not attempt to reidentify the data, except as otherwise permitted under applicable law.

Sources of Consumer Health Data

Our sources of CHD depends on your relationship with us. In many situations, we collect CHD directly from you. For example, we collect CHD when you tell us about a medical reaction you may have had to one of our products. We also collect CHD if you sign up to participate in any of our patient-related programs such as education. We collect CHD if you sign up for webinars or other events. We also collect CHD if you otherwise submit it to us.

We may also get CHD from third parties. For example, from your healthcare providers including specialty pharmacies. We may also get information from health insurance companies and payors. Your authorized legal representatives and caregivers may provide us with information about you. Vendors who provide us with data analytics and market research services may provide us with CHD about you. As permitted by law, these third parties may share certain CHD about you with us.

When We Share Consumer Health Data

We may share CHD for purposes permitted by law. This includes sharing with vendors that provide services to us for the purpose for which the CHD was collected. It includes sharing CHD with regulators or government agencies as required by reporting obligations under law. This also includes sharing CHD with any current affiliates and subsidiaries and any successor to our business, such as part of a merger, acquisition or bankruptcy, etc. Under Washington and Nevada law we are not required to obtain your consent for sharing in these circumstances.

Your Rights

Under Washington and Nevada law you have certain rights. Those rights depend on our relationship. They are subject to certain limitations and are not absolute. This might include if a legal exception applies. If that is the case, we will not be able to process your request. You can exercise your rights by emailing us at privacy@radiuspharm.com. The rights include the following:

- You have the right to confirm that we are collecting, selling or sharing CHD about you. As part of that request, you can ask for a list of third parties to whom CHD has been sold or shared (if any) and for their email addresses. The right to receive a list of third parties applies only if the CHD has been sold or shared for purposes other than those permitted by law.
- You can withdraw consent to collecting and sharing CHD (for sharing that is based upon consent).
- You have the right to ask us to delete your CHD.